

Supported Decision Making

How to Support People with Intellectual Disability
to Make Decisions

The Process as a Supporter

Webinar | 4 May 2022 | 10 am to 12 noon

What is this webinar about?

Many of us help family members and friends to make decisions. But few of us have had the opportunity to think about what actually makes a good decision-making process. We may not have clear strategies we can use when providing decision support.

This webinar builds on the previous two-part webinar series with Michelle Browning in 2021 which explored strategies that decision making supporters could use to increase their decision-making ability. This webinar will explore the key elements of a good decision-making processes and how you can use them in practice.

Topics covered in this webinar

This webinar will focus on understanding and using the six key elements of the supported decision-making process:

1. Looking into and understanding the decision
2. Understanding the person's will and preferences about the decision
3. Gathering information and exploring options
4. Working through barriers and risks
5. Weighing it all up and making the decision
6. Reflecting on the decision and what happens

Who is this webinar for?

This webinar is for anyone who provides assistance to others to make decisions. The webinar will include stories and examples of supporting people with intellectual disability with their decision making. Although useful to have completed the previous webinars, it is not essential.

Presenter

Michelle Browning brings twenty years of experience to her role as Director of Decision Agency, work which has spanned the community, disability, aged and health care sectors. Over the last twelve years Michelle has helped develop, implement and evaluate trials of supported decision-making practice across Australia. She has assisted government and non-government organisations to produce resources, policy and practice guidelines. Michelle facilitates training, practice groups and supervision for supporters wanting to build their confidence as practitioners. She also provides training for decision makers wanting to understand more about decision making and their rights.

Feedback from Previous Participants

“Excellent presenter with lots of knowledge and experience and practical stories about how to apply. The discussions were really valuable.”

“Thought provoking content, and case studies helped crystallise this.”
